6th of June ~ 28th June 2008

Flow is a solo exhibition of emerging multimedia artist David Nixon. David began his career in dry media some 15 years ago with the intent of developing a disciplinary approach to the process of creativity. His formal studies at the Queensland College of Art, Griffith University enabled David to diversify his practice across a range of media from printmaking and painting to video and performance based works.

Process and the momentum generated through practice has become an integral element of David's recent work. Essentially David is fascinated by the communicative values of art, the construction of languages and the value of dialogue. For David, 'art is primarily an affirmation of reflection'.

A curatorial lecture will be given by David Nixon on Saturday 14th of June at 1.00pm
